

29/11/2011

My beloved colleagues salam

I just wanted to share some important techniques of teaching with you all: Series 3

Fleming's learning style is one of the most effective and commonly used learning models. This learning model is very effective in preparing a classroom with different educational and learning styles. Fleming's model is based upon the following principles:

1. Visual learners: Visual learners learn better in a situation where visual aids, diagrams, handouts, videos and pictures are provided.
2. Auditory learners: These learners learn best through listening to discussions, lectures and tape recordings.
3. Kinesthetic learners or tactile learners: These learners are interested in hands-on experiences and problem-solving activities such as touching, performing activities, scientific projects and experimentations.

As thus, Educators must communicate with the learners about the how, what and why of learning in the classroom. In order to teach effectively, the teacher should discuss with the learners the importance or significance of the lesson. He should also discuss with the students the outcome of the study, that is, what they will master at the end of the lesson. In this way, the confidence of his learners will be boosted.

© DR. Qais Faryadi (FST)